JUSTIFICATION, s. is a gracious act of God, whereby he pardons and accepts of sinners on the account of Christ's righteousness imputed to them, and received by faith, Ro. 5:16,18.
Our Justification was, (1) Confirmed and ratified by the resurrection of Christ, Ro. 4:25. (2) And it is manifested and declared by the good works of believers, Ja. 2:21,24,25.

MAN, s. Man was in his original state a very noble and exalted creature, being placed as the head and lord of this world, having all the creatures in subjection to him. The powers and operation of his mind were extensive, capacious, and perfect; capable of contemplating on the works of God with infinite pleasure and delight, and of performing his will without the least deviation. But by sinning against his Creator, his mind is vitiated, corrupted, and debased; and he is in a ruined, lost, miserable, and wretched state. Hence it is asked, What is man? Ps. 8:4. The Heb. word for man is Enosh, i. e. sorry, wretched, and incurably sick; to denote his condition, in his apostasy from God. Man is called Ish, Ps. 4:3. || 49:2. i. e. noble, dignified, and valiant; and Adam, which signifies earthy, and is put for the baser sort of people, Ps. 49:2. Is. 2:9.

MANDRAKES, s. are distinguished into male and female. They are of a strong narcotic quality, and mentioned in some ancient writers as convenient to be given before an amputation, to adven the sense of pain, by stupefying the patient: but modern practice uses it not for any such use. They are reckoned cooling, and recommended in inflammations of the eyes. The mandrakes which Rachel desired, are by some called violets, by others lilies or jessamine, by others citrons, &c. MERCY-Seat. s. 'or Propitiary, was the covering of the ark, in which the tables of the law were deposited. This cover was of gold, and at its ends were fixed the two cherubims of the same metal, which, by their wings extending forward, seemed to form a throne for the majesty of God. Ps. 80:1. and the ark was as it were his footstool. It was an eminent type of Christ, who, by his atonement, covered our sins, and bore the curse for us; standing between God and the curses of the law for our sakes, that God might look on the law through Christ, as fulfilled by him on our behalf, Ro. 3:25.

MOURNING signifies, (1) Godly sorrow for sin, Mat. 5:4. (2) Moderate sorrows under afflictions, Ge. 23:2. (3) Gracious lamentation, Mat. 24:30.

The Hebrews, in mourning for their dead, wept, tore their cloth, s. smote their breasts, fasted, lay on the ground, and went barefoot. The time of mourning was commonly 7 days; and sometimes longer or shorter, as circumstances differed. They used to hire mourners, Jer. 9:17. But the high-priest was to use no signs of mourning; being herein a type of Christ, and his saints in heaven, Le. 21:10, 11, 12.

MYSTERY, s. A secret, a thing hid, or beyond comprehension. A mystery is not a thing contrary to reason, nor utterly unknown as to its being; but a matter of which we have clear evidence as to its existence, yet the nature or mode of it is incomprehensible. In this sense all the doctrines of the gospel are mysteries, because there are inexhaustible depths in them, Ep. 1:9.

The Hebrews had several kinds of offerings, which they presented at the tabernacle and temple. Some were free-will-offerings, as the peace-offerings, vows, offerings of wine, oil, bread, and other things, made to the ministers of the Lord for devotion. Others were of obligation, as the first-fruits, tithes, and sin-offerings. All offerings in general they called Corban: But the offerings of bread, salt, fruits, and liquors, as wine, and oil, which were presented to the temple, they called Mincha. The Hebrews had properly but 3 sorts of sacrifices, (1) The burnt-offering, which was wholly consumed, only the priest had the skin, Le. 7:8. (2) The sacrifice for sin, or expiation, for him who had fallen into any offence against the law. Le. 4.  OLIVE, s. a tree full of fatness, and yields plenty of oil. There are two kinds. The cultivated olive-tree is of a moderate height, its trunk knotty, its bark smooth, and of an ash color; its wood is solid and yellowish, the leaves are oblong, and almost like those of the willow, of a green color, dark on the upper side, and white on the under. In June it puts forth white flowers, in bunches. The fruit is oblong and plump. The wild olive is smaller in all its parts. CRUDEN.

PALM-Trees, s. is an upright, tall, fruit-bearing, flourishing, and shadowy tree, Ps. 92:12.
Song 7:7,8. Jer. 10:5. *It grows by the sweet springs of water, and continues long. It will not be pressed or bowed downward, or grow crooked, though heavy weights be laid on it.
This tree is one of the most famous of all the forest, and is the usual emblem of constancy, fruitfulness, patience, and victory; which the more it is oppressed, the more it flourishes; the higher it grows, the stronger and broader it is in the top. One kind is the date-tree. The Hebrews called it Thamar, and the Greeks, Phoenix. The finest and best palm-trees were about Jericho, En-gedi, and along the banks of Jordan. Palm-trees from the same root produce*

Prayer comes from a Hebrew word, signifying appeal, intercession, intercession; whereby we offer our own cause, and that of others, to God.

The parts of Prayer are said to be invocation, adration, confession, petition, pleading, dedication, thanksgiving, and blessing.

pro, before, and orizō, to determine. Ac. 4:28. where it seems to refer to the pointing out and marking beforehand, the boundaries of the great events here referred to, by the prophetic writings, Lu. 22:32. Ac. 2:23. to decree or ordain beforehand, fore-appoint, Ro. 8:29, 30. where it is applied to God's fore-ordinating those whom he foreknew, i. e. with approbation, namely of the Gentiles, as well as the Jews, to be conformable to the image of his Son, both *in holiness and glory. So, Ep. 1:5. proorizans,* having fore-appointed us, i. e. Believers in general, to the adoption of sons. But in v. 11. it relates particularly to the Jewish converts, *who eklogēmen proorizantes, were taken, as it* were, by lot, being before appointed, according to God's purpose of waiting under Christ, until all things, both which are in heaven and earth, i. e. angels and men, Jews and Gentiles.
Comp. v. 9. and 10.

In 1 Co. 2:7. it refers to the gospel-plan of saving mankind, particularly the Gentiles, (see Ro. 16: 25, 26. Ep. 3:5, 8, 9. which was ordained before the world began; see 2 Ti. 1:9. 1 Pe. 1:20. The above cited are all the passages of the N. T. wherein the verb occurs. 'The word predes-tinate is taken for the design that God has been pleased to have from all eternity of bringing, by his free grace, to faith and eternal salvation, some certain persons, whom he loved in Christ; whilst he leaves others to continue in their infidelity, or in their corruptions. Those that are so left are the reprobate, and the others are the elect or predestinated.' CAUVEN.

 PRIEST, s. The Priest, under the law, was a person consecrated and ordained of God, not only to teach the people, and pray for them, but also to offer up sacrifices for his own sins, and those of the people, Le. 4:5. Before the promulgation of the law, the first-born of every family was a priest; but afterwards, the priesthood was limited to the tribe of Levi, Nu. 16:40.
*The term Priest is properly applied to Christ, of PROSELYTE, s. In Greek Proselytēs, which signifies a stranger. The Hebrew word Ger, or Necher, has the same signification. The Jews had two kinds of proselytes or converts; Proselytes of the Gate, who worshipped the true God, but did not submit to Jewish rites; and Proselytes of Justice, who submitted to the whole Jewish religion. These they allowed all privileges of this life, and the life to come.

Six cities were appointed for refuge, three on the east of Jordan, Rezer, i. e. fortification; Ramoth-Gilead, i. e. exalted, and Golan, i. e. passage, revolution, or passing over. And three on the west of Jordan, Kedesh, i. e. holiness; Shechem, i. e. a part, or portion, and Hebron, i. e. fellowship, Jos. 20:7, 8. These were cities for the analoger to take refuge in, and were typical of Christ, who is appointed a refuge for sinners to flee to, and find safety and rest in from sin, death, and hell, Pr. 18:10. He. 6:18.

REPENTANCE, s. Is. either, (1) Distress and trouble for the calamities procured by sin, in which case Cain, Ahab, and Judas repented, Ge. 4:13. 1 K. 21:29. Mat. 27:3. Or, (2) A godly sorrow for sin, on account of its malignant nature, and offensiveness to God, which is accompanied with a hatred of sin, and a love of holiness, Ac. 11:18. 2 Co. 7:10.
 Evangelical repentance is that saving grace wrought in the soul by the Spirit of God, whereby a sinner is made to see and be sensible of his sin, is grieved and humbled before God on account of it, not so much for the punishment for which sin has made him liable, as that thereby God is dishonored, and offended [his rights infringed], his laws [seen as holy, just, and good] violated, and his own soul polluted and defiled; and this grief arises from love to God, and is accompanied with a hatred of sin, a fixed resolution to forsake it, and an expectation of favor and forgiveness through the merits of Christ.
 Mat. 3:2,8. Ac. 3:19. 2 Co. 7:10. Caution.
 Repentance, when ascribed to God, does not intend a change of his mind, but a change of his outward conduct in his dispensations, Ma. 3:6.

SACRIFICE, s. is a solemn act of religious wor- ship, which consisted in offering up, or devoting something, animate or inanimate, on an altar, by the hands of a priest, either as an expression of gratitude to God, for some special favor, or to aven their dependence on him, or to conciliate his favor. Sacrifices were in use before, as well as under the law of Moses, and were of beasts, birds, bread, oil, &c. They may be distinguished into, (1) Typical sacrifices, as those already mentioned, Ex. 12:27. (2) The perfect, all-sufficient, and infinite sacrifice of Christ, whereby he hath atoned for and put away sin, He. 9:26. and reconciled us to God, Col. 1:21, 22. (3) SADDUCEES, s. Just men, Syc. Cut, or schism.

So called from Sadoch, their first founder, who lived under Antigonus Socchorus, who succeeded Simon the Just. They rejected all Scriptures except the five books of Moses, denied the immortality of the soul, future rewards, the resurrection of the body, and existence of angels or spirits.

joined to the breast. It has 2 eyes in the middle of its head, and 2 towards its extremity, between which come out, as it were, 2 arms, which are divided into 2, like the claws of a lobster. It has 8 legs proceeding from its breast, and every one divided into 6 parts, covered with hair, at the end whereof are 6 talons or claws. The belly is divided into 7 rings, from the last of which the tail proceeds, which is divided into 7 little heads, of which the last is armed with a sting, filled with a cold poison, which it squirts into the part which it stings. The scorpion is of a blackish color, like soot: it waddles as it goes; and flies violently with its snout, and by its feet, on such persons as it seizes, so that it cannot be plucked off but with difficulty. The best and surest remedy against the bite is said to be to squeeze it to pieces on the wound. It is said the dam brings forth 11 small, wormlike and round young, who, after they are hatched, kill their mother.

 SOUL. s. Heb. Nephesh; in Gr. Psuche. It signifies, (1) That rational, spiritual, and immortal substance in man, which is the origin of our thoughts, desires, and reasonings; and bears some resemblance to his divine Maker. Mat. 10:28. (2) The whole person, both soul and body. Ge. 12:5. (3) The life of man. Ps. 33:19. (4) Desire, love, inclination. Ge. 23:18. (5) The spirit of a brute. Ge. 1:24. Le. 17:11. Ec. 3:21.

The eternal salvation of my soul is of greater importance, and big with greater event, than the temporal salvation of a whole kingdom, though it were for the space of ten thousand ages; because there will come up a point, an instant in eternity, when that one soul shall have existed as many ages, as all the individuals of a whole kingdom, ranged in close succession, will in the whole have existed in the space of ten thousand ages: Therefore one soul is capable of a larger share of happiness or misery, throughout an endless eternity, for that will still be before it, than that a whole kingdom is capable of in ten thousand ages. STOICS, a sect of heathen philosophers; the followers of Zeno, who used to teach under a porch, or portico. They held that a man ought to be free from all passions, as they esteemed that to be the only way to be ordered by necessity and fate.
Josephus says, that the Pharisees approach very near to the sentiments of the Stoics. They affected the same stiffness, patience, meekness, austerity, and insensibility. The Stoics were in considerable numbers at Athens, when Paul came there, Ac. 17:18.

 SURETY, s. Christ is the surety of the better testament, or covenant, He. 7:22. The word sig- nifies, one that draws nigh; Christ drew nigh to his Father in the counsel of peace, and undertook to be the savior and redeemer of his people; he substituted himself in their place and died; he interposed between the creditor and the debtor, and became surety for the payment of the debt of the latter, and so stood engaged for them, and in their room. Christ is not the surety for the Father to his people, but for them to the Father; as to satisfy for their sin, to work out a righteousness for them, to preserve and keep them, and make them happy, which is an instance of matchless love. Da. GILL.

That of the temple, 22lb. 12oz. as appears by casting up the 3000 shekels, a shekel being 1 s. 3d. or the fourth part of an ounce; therefore a common talent of gold was 26994. 12s. and of silver, 1871. 10s. The talent of the sanctuary was twice as much. In Troy weight a common talent was 62lb. 6oz., and a talent of the sanctuary 125lb. If a talent of gold was of no more value than a talent of silver, as some think, then in Troy weight it was but 3lb. 11oz. and in avoirdupois 2lb. 14oz.; consequently it is easy to account for the king's crown being a talent of gold, 2 S. 12:30. and it might occasionally be worn without any great inconvenience. TEMPLE, s. signifies, (1) A house or dwelling of God; or a building set apart for the worship of the true God. It is spoken, (I) Of that mag- nificent building erected by Solomon at Jerusalem, about 1000 years before Christ. It was the grandest pile of building that was ever erected by man, not for its bigness, it being but 150 feet in length, 105 in breadth, including the sanctuary, sanctuary, and the porch, (according to some) but its excellency consisted in its materials, out-buildings, and costly ornaments and decorations; and especially in those marks of divine favor it was honored with as, (1) The ark of the covenant. (2) The Shekinah, or divine presence.
(3) The Urim and Thummim, by which the high-priest consulted God in difficult and immense cases. (4) The holy fire, 1 K. 8:38.
(5) The spirit of prophecy. All these were said to be wanting in the second temple; but were eminently in Christ, whose presence in it made the glory of it greater than that of the first temple, Hag. 2:9. (II) It is spoken of the tabernacle, 1 S. 1:9. || 3:3. (III) Of Christ's body, or human nature, in which the fulness of the Godhead dwelt bodily, Jn. 2:19. Col. 2:9. (IV) Of the church of God, 2 Co. 6:16. (V) Of heaven, which is God's throne, Ps. 11:4. Re. 7:15.
(VI) Of individual Christians, 1 Co. 3:16, 17.

THUMMIM. Urim and Thummin signify light and perfection, or the shining and the perfect; according to Jerome, doctrine and judgment; the LXX, declaration, or manifestation, and truth. There are various conjectures about the Urim and Thummin, whether they were the stones in the high-priest's breast-plate, or something distinct from them; which it is not worth our while to inquire into, since God has left it a secret. It is evident that the Urim and Thum-min were appointed to inquire of God by, on momentous occasions; and continued in use (as some think) only till the building of Solomon's temple; and all conclude, that this was never restored after its destruction.

It is thought that it was the butcher's, or place of slaughter at Jerusalem, lying to the S. of the city, in the valley of the children of Hinnon; and that a constant fire used to be kept there, for the carcases and other filthiness brought thither from the city; on which account, perhaps, it is USURER, v. Ex. 22:25. not be to him as a u.

 USURP, v. 1 Ti. 2:12. not a woman to u.
 USURY, s. is a certain gain or profit which a person makes of his money or goods by lending the same. This is, if but a common profit, lawful; but it is generally taken in an evil sense, viz. for an unlawful profit which a person makes of his money or goods. The Hebrew word for usury signifies: biting. All usury among the Israelites was forbidden; but to a stranger they might lend upon usury, De. 23:20. This law of not taking usury appears to be peculiar to the Jewish state, for to us it seems as equitable to make profit of our money as of our lands.

 VOICE, s. The daughter of the voice, called in Hebrew, Bath-kol, was, as the Jewish writers say, a preternatural way in which God disseminated his will to them after prophecy had ceased in Israel. On this Bath-kol, which they pretended was an articulate voice from God, as he spoke to Samuel, are founded many of their traditions and customs of their nation.

 WISDOM, s. Heb. Chachemah; Gr. Sophia.
 Wisdom, knowledge, and understanding, are generally looked upon as synonymous terms, or words of the same import; yet, perhaps, they are more accurate who consider them as distinct.
 Knowledge consists in having a stock of judicious and proper ideas and notions of things; Wisdom consists in reducing these to practice, in conducting an affair with ingenuity and skill.
 'Knowledge hath its seat in the speculative understanding, Wisdom in the practical. Knowledge is an understanding of general rules; Wisdom is a drawing conclusions from those rules, in order to particular cases. A man may have the knowledge of the whole Scripture, and have all learning in the treasury of his memory, and yet be destitute of skill to make use of them on particular occasions.' CHARNOCK.
 Hence a person may have considerable knowledge, who yet, in respect to wisdom, is a fool. Such are all who know the will of God, but do it not, Pr. 17:16.
 It is put for, (1) That prudence which enables
